The Right View of the Washington Tragody.

The Ecominor, a weekly paper of New York city, and an organ, we believe, of the Baptist Christians, discussing the Sickles case, says:

"We regard them all, in the different parts they acted in this tragedy of blood, as slike guilty of the gravest of crimes, and as slike meriting the condemnation both of heaven and earth. If there is any distinction to be allowed between the three, it is not in favor of the assassin's victim, but rather for the young and gid-dr wife-married at sixteen, with no dy wife-married at sixteen, with no preparation for her position; the spoiled child of society-the pupil as well as the companion of a libertine husband; the unwatched and unconsselled belle at Washington, flattered by American senators and toreign diplomats; a star in those dissolute circles of fashion at our national capital, in which is often represented the libertinism of every country in Christen-

John Bramwell and wife, aged respectively about 70 years, were killed last night at 7 o'clock.—
They were coming to Madison in a buggy, and in going down this turnpike, the night being very dark, the borse ran off the road, precipitating the occupants of the buggy into a railroad cut. The unfortunate victims were found early this morning. Mrs. Bramwell's body was still warm, but life was extinct. An inquest was held over them, which elicited the above facts.

Deliberate Murder in Hart ord.

"Yesterday afternoon there occurred, at No. 54 South Hudson street, the most herribly cold bleoded and atroctous murder that it was ever our painful duty to chronicle. It appears that Christopher C. Colson, whose wife some few months since procured a bill of divorce from him, on the ground of ba-bitual cruelty, has, since that time, followed her with continual menaces, and frequently publicly threatened to take her life, and to kill her mother and sister. Saturday hight last he slept at the house of his brother, James H Colson, baker, No. 54 South Hud-Friday had washed away about 250 feet of son street. The house is occupied by four families, Mr. Colson living on the first floor in the north half. Christopher was sitting blinding snow storm, about two o'clock on wife, who had since the divorce taken her hand was now her own, and that she did not wish to have anything to do with him. She then attempted to leave the room, when he followed her, caught her by the dress behind, and out her throat from her right ear to a point just below the chin, making two horrible gashes, severing the carotid artery He manifested very little parsion or feeling of any kind, but remarking that he hoped she was satisfied," threw his bloody weapon —a large two-edged fish knife—under the table, and proceeded to the pantry, where he commenced devouring some pies that were stored there. The inmates of the house were, of course, thrown into the greatest consternation and excitement by the terrible event that had just transpired. Some attempt was made to arrest the murderer, but he was held so much in dread by those present, who feared that he might be soid armed, that he was allowed, after he had caten and drank what he wanted, to leave the house unmolested. From the ho-tel he walked in a leisurely manner up Ferry street till he came nearly opposite the old Bartlett Tavern, where he was arrested—Hartford Coveant.

Dreadful Death from Hydrophobia.

Some six weeks ago Joseph Wright, reiding on Freeman street, not isr from Western-row, was bitten by his own dog, that afterward, biting several persons and a number of animals, and giving decided symptoms of rabids, was put to death. Wright thought hule of the circumstance in the arm upon which the dog had lastened his teeth. The pain increased until he deemed it advisable to send for a paysician, who gave him a lotion, but intimated to no one the danger of his patient.

Wright's suffering increased, the pain extending to almost every part of his body, until Sunday morning, when he became raving mad, and his disease was declared to be the hydrophobia. He raved at times, and tore his hair and flesh, and formed at the mou h and screamed like a demon, presenting a sight terrible to behold. It was necessary to bind him to the bed to prevent him from committing feet of them. The driver of this locometive, violence upon himself, and often in his exquisite misery he prayed to be killed at once and relieved of his agony. The sight of water, or the mention of the term, threw him into spasms, and he fell trembed, and they were taken out and laid on ling and groaning upon the floor. Those mattrasses, cushions and whatever could who witnessed the poor man's madness, be made available, upon the ground, while say they never knew before how supremethe survivors took turns in hording blankets by wretched man may be-it was awful over them to protect them from the storm, to contemplate, and would have startled For four hours and a half this state of and horrified the deliest and most unimpassioned nature.
